Chased by an Angry Bear.

Last Monday Hiram Cobb, of Coolbaugh township, Pa., set a steel bear trap in a thicket of scrub oaks near Birch Run, three miles west of Stauffer's Mills. On Tuesday morning Gibson Cobb, the trapper's 17 year old son, told his father he guessed he would take a stroll over to Birch Run and see whether a bear had got caught in the trap during the night, and Mr. Cobb told Gibson that if he intended to go near the trap he had better take the rifle along. The lad said he didn't like to lug a gun so far, and off he started without it, telling his father that he would stop at Charley Holmes's on the way and borrow a gun. Young Cobb changed his mind before he had gone far, and instead of going near Holmes's place, he took a short cut over Nettle Hill, and across the plateau to the spot where the trap had been set. There was no bear in the trap, and the boy after noticing that the bear had, with his father had placed it, started for home. On the hillside overlooking Birch Run he sat down on a rock to rest, and while he sat there he saw a bear waddle out of the bushes, only a few yards from where the trap was set. The bear walked down to the brook and took a drink, and young Cobb said he was then sorry that he hadn't taken the rifle along, for he might have shot the bear easy enough while it was slaking its thirst.

Then the bear turned about, sat upon its haunches for two or three minutes, moved its head as if it had got wind of the beef head and made for the thicket where the trap was concealed. The bear's movements excited the boy, and according to his own statement, he felt so sure that the bear would get caught right away that he ran down to the creek, hid behind a log, and listened. He heard the bear bellowing and thrashing in the scrub oaks, and this, he said, excited him so much more than the first sight of the bear that he forgot all about danger.

He hunted around for a big stone to throw at the bear's head, but before he ran across one that suited him the bear came flying out of the thicket with the trap fast to its left fore foot. Just then the drag on the strap caught in a root and jerked the bear back, and the fearless lad grabbed up a round stone and hit the bear on the head. This made the bear furious, and it made a lunge for young Cobb, tore its foot loose from the trap, and came within a foot of striking him down. The boy said that he was in great danger of being killed, and he took to his legs, with the maddened bear close upon him. The bear chased him for a quarter of a mile, roaring at every step, but its bleeding paw kept it from running as fast as the fleet footed youth. All at once young Cobb heard a rifle crack, and on looking over his shoulder, he saw the bear fall and tumble over and over down the hillside. Then he stopped.

The rifle that made the noise was fired by Mr. Cobb, who had sent a bullet through the bear's lungs and killed it. Fearing that his son might get into trouble, Mr. Cobb had started for the locality in less than an hour after Gibson had left the house, and he had appeared on the scene in time to hear the boy call for help. The bear was a female, and weighed 314 pounds.

LOOKING FOR HIS GIRL.—A Bucks county, Pa., preacher who had been annoyed during a recent sermon by a young man who stood outside and frequently opened the door a trifle to look in, concluded his sermon in this manner: "We would be pleased, moreover, to have the young man who is now standing outside the door come in and make certain whether she is here or not. That would be a great deal better than opening the door half an inch and exposing the people in the last row of seats to a draft."

General elections will be held one week from to-day in the following ten States: Massachusetts, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Maryland, Virginia, Mississippi, Iowa and Nebraska. Legislatures which will meet next winter will be held in all of them except Pennsylvania and Nebraska, and the Legislatures in Maryland, Ohio and Iowa will elect United States Senators to succeed Senators Wilson, Payne and Allison, respectively.
